

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are living in poverty has increased. The number of people living on less than $1 a day has risen from 1.1 billion in 1981 to 1.5 billion in 1998. The number of people living on less than $2 a day has risen from 2.1 billion in 1981 to 2.5 billion in 1998.

There are a number of reasons why the number of people living in poverty has increased. One of the main reasons is that the world's population has grown.

The world's population has grown from 5 billion in 1981 to 6 billion in 1998. This means that there are more people in the world who need food, clothing, and shelter.

Another reason why the number of people living in poverty has increased is that the world's resources are being used up. The world's forests are being cut down, the world's rivers are being polluted, and the world's oceans are becoming overfished.

These actions are reducing the amount of resources available to the world's population. This means that there are fewer resources available to the world's poor people.

A third reason why the number of people living in poverty has increased is that the world's economy is not growing fast enough. The world's economy is growing at a slower rate than it was in the 1980s.

This means that there are fewer jobs available in the world. This means that there are fewer people who are earning money. This means that there are fewer people who are able to afford food, clothing, and shelter.

There are a number of things that can be done to help reduce the number of people living in poverty. One of the most important things is to reduce the world's population.

This can be done by encouraging people to have smaller families. This can be done by providing people with access to family planning services.

Another important thing is to protect the world's resources. This can be done by stopping people from cutting down forests, polluting rivers, and overfishing oceans.

Finally, it is important to help the world's economy grow faster. This can be done by providing people with access to education and training.

This can help people to get better jobs and earn more money. This can help people to afford food, clothing, and shelter.

There are a number of other things that can be done to help reduce the number of people living in poverty. These include providing people with access to clean water, electricity, and healthcare.

It is important to remember that poverty is a global problem. It is not just a problem in the developing world. It is a problem in every country in the world.

We need to work together to find solutions to this problem. We need to work together to help reduce the number of people living in poverty.

There are a number of organizations that are working to help reduce the number of people living in poverty. These include the United Nations, the World Bank, and the International Labour Organization.

These organizations are working to provide people with access to education, training, and healthcare. They are also working to help people to get better jobs and earn more money.

It is important to support these organizations. We need to give them the money and resources that they need to do their work.

There are a number of ways that we can support these organizations. We can donate money to them. We can volunteer our time to help them.

We can also support them by using their products and services. This can help them to raise money to do their work.

It is important to remember that poverty is a human rights issue. Every person has the right to a decent standard of living. We need to work together to help everyone to have this right.

There are a number of things that we can do to help everyone to have a decent standard of living. We need to work together to find solutions to this problem.
