

whom I shared my intellectual frustrations as well as my excitement.

Last, but not least, the many years I spent as a graduate student have placed tremendous pressures on the life I have shared with the closest and most beloved ones; this work would not have been possible had it not been for the love, support and the genuine sense of sharing provided to me by Sami Zubi, my friend, partner and the father of my children.