

22. Poulantzas, op.cit.
23. For example, A.L. Szymanski, "Trends in the American Working Class," Socialist Revolution, No. 10.
24. Braverman, op.cit., p. 348.
25. Ibid., p. 355.
26. Ian Gough, "Marx's Theory of Productive and Unproductive Labor," in New Left Review, No. 76, November-December, 1977. Quoted in Braverman, ibid., p. 411.
27. Poulantzas, op.cit., p. 94.
28. Ibid.
29. Ibid., p. 14.
30. Ibid., p. 25.
31. Ibid.
32. In Marx's words:

"Economic conditions had at first transformed the mass of the people of the country into workers. The combination of capital has created for this mass a common situation, common interests. This mass is thus already a class as against capital, but not yet for itself. In the struggle, of which we have noted only a few phases, this mass becomes united, and constitutes itself as a class for itself. The interests it defends become class interests. But the struggle of class against class is a political struggle."

From Karl Marx, The Poverty of Philosophy, quoted by Poulantzas, Political Power...op.cit., p. 59.
33. In 1959, Arab citizens were allowed access to membership in the Histadrut, mainly for access to Kupat Holim (Sik Fund), the nationwide health care system over which the Histadrut exercises full monopoly. Arabs, however, are not likely to become partners in the Histadrut as capital.
34. One example of a serious opponent is given in Wright, op.cit.
35. For a reference, see, for example, Henry Lefebvre, Dialectical Materialism.